

May 2024 Writing Prompt Winner

Kalina, Age 13

If I could pass any law about horses it would be that everybody has to love theirs. If people just loved their horses then most problems with them would be solved. People would not purposefully abuse their horses and the horses' hearts would be full of happiness. Yes, there would be instances where there is ignorant abuse. If you loved your horse and committed ignorant abuse you would learn from your mistake and make a better decision next time. All so many horses want is love. There will always be the brutal show barns that care about scores and style and nothing about horse care or what the horse feels. There are the small little barns that focus on horse care and teaching people to love their horses. If there would just simply be a law that everybody had to love their horses, the horse industry would be just about perfect.
